Associate, Corporate Department

feliciayen@paulhastings.com

Felicia Yen is an associate in the Corporate practice of Paul Hastings and is based in the firm's New York office.

Ms. Yen's practice is focused on a broad range of capital markets and lending transactions. She represents public and private companies and financial institutions in equity and debt securities offerings, exchange offers, tender offers, and bank financing transactions, including cash flow and asset based credit facilities. She also advises on issues of corporate governance and other general corporate matters.

In 2014 and 2015, Ms. Yen was on secondment at a global investment bank, where she worked on capital markets transactions.

In addition to her corporate matters, Ms. Yen acts as one of the firm's liaisons to the New York Housing Court's Volunteer Lawyer for the Day Program, in which attorneys represent tenants and landlords in non-payment cases. She also serves as a member of the Talent Development Committee for the firm's New York office.

Ms. Yen graduated from Harvard University, where she received an A.B. in Biochemical Sciences and Economics and a Foreign Language Citation in French. She received a J.D. from the University of Pennsylvania Law School. During her time at Penn Law, she was a Senior Editor for the Journal of Business Law, the Public Relations Editor for the East Asia Law Review, and a recipient of the Distinguished Pro Bono Service Award. In addition to her law degree, she earned a Certificate in Business and Public Policy from the University of Pennsylvania Wharton School.

Ms. Yen is admitted to the State Bar in New York.
