

Ryan M Enchelmayer

Associate, Corporate Department

ryanenchelmayer@paulhastings.com

Ryan Enchelmayer is an associate in the Corporate practice of Paul Hastings and is a member of the firm's IP Transactions and Licensing practice.

Mr. Enchelmayer's practice focuses on technology and commercial transactions, including licensing, research, software and IP development, collaboration, acquisition, carve-out, investment, lending, software and other services, manufacturing, supply, sale, resale, distribution, marketing and other commercial and technology-driven transactions and relationships. He regularly counsels companies on the protection, sharing and enforcement of their important technologies and associated IP rights, and has extensive experience in M&A, financing and other transactions involving IP diligence reviews and negotiation of key transaction agreements in connection with a broad range of domestic and international deals.

He represents public and private companies engaged in a variety of IP-intensive industries, including providers, developers, customers, buyers, sellers, investors, sponsors, researchers, lenders and borrowers in the software, software service, pharmaceutical, healthcare technology, data, information technology, electronics, communications, internet and web-enabled technology industries, among others.

Mr. Enchelmayer also works with clients to develop and implement trademark strategies and regularly files and prosecutes trademark applications.
